Scott:

Yes, in that case, please send both the chip slides and the larger films to HAS Images. Thank you.

Paul:

I also think we are on the same page but, just to be sure, the "chipping" process means the part of the larger film that has the specific area of interest is cut out to make a smaller slide that can fit into the stereoscope device. Thus, the part of the film your folks will want to see is in the "chipped" portion. We will be sending you both the larger film (which now has a hole in it where the "chip" was removed) and the chipped slide so that HAS Images can confirm that they go together and make copies of both. Dr. Gustafson will get them out this evening so hopefully HAS Images will get them tomorrow. Thanks.

Scott

Scott:

I think we are on the same page here: We just need Dr. Gustafson to send (via overnight delivery) his original full-sized films to HAS Images. HAS will make duplicate film positives for us, and will return the original full-sized films to Dr. Gustafson.

Paul:

As the folks at HAS Images may have predicted for you, Dr. Gustafson only has a single set of the films. However, he is familiar with HAS Images and would be comfortable sending his original to them on a loan basis for them to make a prompt copy and return the original to Dr. Gustafson. If that approach is agreeable, Dr. Gustafson will put them in a Fed Ex package for overnight delivery. Please confirm.

Also, Dr. Gustafson explained to me that he performed a process called "chipping" in which he cut the relevant portions of the films to make slides to fit in the stereoscope. Assuming we have an agreement that HAS Images will simply make its own duplicate, Dr. Gustafson will send both the "chipped" slides and the original full-sized films.

I am copying Dr. Gustafson on this message so he can correct me if I have butchered the explanation.

Thanks

Scott
